TIM KEARNS, STATE PRISON FARM FUGITIVE, CAPTURED HERE

Police Nab Man Who Fled From New Lexington.

ALLEGED FORGER

Trapped in Friend's Home After Return From Chicago.

Timothy Kearns, 28, East Liverpool, who escaped from the state brick yards at New Lexington where he had been working as a "trusty" last May, was being held by police today pending the arrival of a guard from the state penitentiary.

He was arrested last night in the home of a friend along the Cleveland and Pittsburgh railroad tracks by Chief of Police Hugh McDermott and Patrolman Herman Roth.

Kearns, sentenced to serve from two to 20 years in prison a year ago on a forgery charge, was sent to the state brick yards by the penitentiary warden.

Following his escape, he returned to East Liverpool, but later went to Chicago where he secured a job with a carnival during the summer. He returned to East Liverpool last night.

What About Native Borns?
Fraud Attracts Attention.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of the Review-Tribune.)

CHICAGO is arranging to deport "alien gangsters and bootleggers" that break the law—individuals not naturalized, whose wickedness shocks Chicago. That's a good idea, but something ought to be done about the native-born American citizens, without whose co-operation the "alien thugs" could not make their profits.

Wherever you find an "alien thug" making money through crime and through bootlegging, you will also find a few "good Americans" sharing his profits and helping in his work.

AN IRISH girl, living in a queer old castle, on the coast of Ireland, wanted to write. But nobody would print what she wrote; the publishers sent everything back.

Then she wrote "The Diary of an Eighteenth Century Lady of Fashion" and made a success of it, although she wasn't an 18-year-old lady, and didn't know much about fashions. The book was published eagerly. It was taken by genuine solemn reviewers and now that the rather innocent fraud is revealed, the young woman, probably will have respectful attention from the book publishers.

THUS it goes, if by fraud you prove ability, you attract attention and are permitted to show what you can do on your own account. Even as great a man as Michael Angelo, greatest that ever lived in the world of art, turned to innocent fraud to establish his power. He was young, full of genius. He carved out of marble beautiful imitations of old Greek works, buried the imitations in the ground that they might acquire the appearance of age. Then he sent a sample to Rome, to the Cardinal interested in the fine arts.

THE Cardinal told him to reveal to nobody where he excavated the "ancient work of art." The Cardinal would come himself and continue the excavating.

Michael Angelo wrote, telling the Cardinal that if he liked that sort of thing, he, Michael, could make as many for him as he wanted. The Cardinal, a wise man took the thing in good part.

FRENCHMEN complain of the high cost of living. But bread costs only three and one-half cents a pound. We should not complain of that here. The French government regulates the price of bread, and has done so for many years.

Hard liquor, which the foolish Napoleon III put within easy reach of the French people to make himself popular, is very heavily taxed, which is one good result of the war. Light wine is not considered an "alcoholic drink" in France. It is part of the nation's food. The people drink it as we drink coffee, and as temperately.

Sir John Carling Plane Hops off; Royal Windsor is Ready to Jump

Three Hats in Ring For School Board

HEARST PLANE FELL VERY FAST

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Old Glory fell very fast, according to the belief of the two radio operators the Lamport and Holt liner Vestris, which arrived today from South American ports. Two messages from the plane were picked by the ship.

The operators said they first received an "all well" message which was followed shortly afterward by the first distress call. This they said, led them to surmise that something suddenly happened aboard the monoplane and it went down very fast.

MARSHALL BILL BATTLE OPENS

Governor Appoints Committees to Draft Arguments.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 7.—Appointment by Governor Vic Donahey of committees to draft arguments for and against the Marshall bill, designed to provide legal compensation for village mayors and justices of the peace, was announced today. These arguments will be mailed by Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown to Ohio voters in connection with the proposal of opponents of the bill to bring about its defeat through a referendum vote at the statewide election next November.

The bill was passed at the last session of the Ohio legislature with a view to remedying the situation due to an U. S. supreme court ruling early this year that present Ohio statutes providing compensation for village mayors and justices of the peace are unconstitutional and void.

As members of the committee to prepare argument favoring the Marshall bill, the governor selected Senator L. T. Marshall, Republican, Xenia, author of the bill; Senator Alton H. Ething, Orville Wayne county, Democrat; and Attorney James S. White, Columbus, former superintendent of the Ohio anti-Saloon league.

Donahey appointed as members of the committee to draft the argument opposing the Marshall bill, C. C. Jones, Columbus, president Ohio State Automobile association; M. B. Cain, Columbus, president Columbus Federation of Labor; Senator George H. Bender, Cleveland; Senator Nils P. Johnson, Youngstown, and Attorney Maxwell E. Wolgamot, Cleveland.

Bender, Johnson, and Wolgamot constitute the committee directing the referendum campaign against the Marshall bill.

COUNTY WARDEN WARS ON DOGS

Assisted by police, he killed six canines at Wellsville, one at Salem, one at East Liverpool and the other in Butler township. Three dogs captured in Lisbon and Wellsville will be gassed unless their owners appear before the end of the week.

No claims for sheep or cattle injured or killed during the week were received by the warden.

THREE TRANS-ATLANTIC PASSENGER LINERS RUSH TO ASSISTANCE OF NEW YORK-TO-ROME PLANE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Three trans-Atlantic passenger steamers are rushing to the assistance of the New York-to-Rome monoplane Old Glory, which sent out an S. O. S. message when 500 miles east of Cape Race, Newfoundland, early today.

The S. S. Transylvania, bound for New York, informed the radio corporation of America by wireless at 5:30 o'clock this morning that it had received the Old Glory's S. O. S. and had altered its course to lend the airplane assistance.

L. A. (Frick) Wallover, of the Wallover Oil company, East End; Joseph T. Croxall, of the Croxall Chemical company, who is chairman of the health board, and Dr. Colin F. Kinsey, dentist, were ready to qualify for the race for school board places. Three places are to be filled, the terms of Members D. E. White, F. T. Weaver and George Wilhelm expiring. Wallover, Croxall and Kinsey will file their petitions with the election board tonight or tomorrow morning.

Councilman Thomas Farrall, defeated for the Republican mayoralty nomination in the August 9 primary, today filed as an independent for another term as solon-at-large.

Council President N. P. Kerr, also defeated in the Republican mayoralty fight, entered the race for township trustee.

John Weber, independent, filed his petition for mayor.

A flood of petitions for township fights in other sections of the county were also filed with Election Board Clerk J. M. Moore.

The sky was overcast when the Sir John Carling took off with the wind blowing north to northwest. Out at sea the weather was clear and visibility good.

HARBOR GRACE, N. F., Sept. 7.—The Canadian plane Royal Windsor was sighted approaching the Harbor Grace flying field at 3:15 o'clock local time.

OLD ORCHARD, Maine, Sept. 7.—Using the same runway from which the monoplane Old Glory took off for Rome yesterday, the Canadian plane Royal Windsor, piloted by C. A. "Duke" Schiller and Phil Wood, hopped off from here today for Harbor Grace, Newfoundland. From Harbor Grace the fliers will take off across the Atlantic to England.

The Royal Windsor's take-off was perfect. The plane was brought here late yesterday from Scarborough, Maine.

WORLD FLIERS AT RANGOON

Schlee and Brock Hop From Calcutta to Burma.

RANGOON, India, Sept. 7.—The American round-the-world plane Pride of Detroit arrived here at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from Calcutta after passing safely through terrific monsoon storms.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—The round-the-world monoplane, Pride of Detroit, piloted by Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock, arrived at Rangoon, Burma, today from Calcutta, according to a Central News dispatch.

CALCUTTA, Sept. 7.—The monoplane, Pride of Detroit, carrying Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock, of Detroit, on a round-the-world flight, hopped off from the Dumdum aerodrome at 6:25 o'clock this morning for Rangoon, Burma.

The Old Glory was a land plane, and is not equipped with pontoons, which would make a landing on the ocean possible. The fear was expressed here that the plane had been forced to descend and that as soon as the plane hit the water the radio was put out of commission, which would account for the fact that no further word was received after the appeal for help had been sent out.

A message from Captain Bone, of the Transylvania, said that the position of the Old Glory at the time the S. O. S. was sent was indicated at 49.50 north latitude, 41.15 west longitude. The Transylvania was in latitude 50.48 north and longitude 42.04 west. Captain Bone immediately altered his course to go to the plane's assistance.

Ninth Life Exacted By Crazy Mill Man

Mrs. Gladys De Capua, Daughter-in-law of Killer, Dies in Hospital in Youngstown.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 7.—With the death of Mrs. Gladys De Capua, 24, in City hospital here, the toll of lives taken by Tony De Capua, crazed steel worker, today stood at nine.

Mrs. De Capua, a daughter-in-law of the killer, was seriously wounded when De Capua staged his insane orgy of murder last Saturday night, during which his wife, four children and two grandchildren, were shot to death.

When police arrived, De Capua fought a gun battle with them in the front yard of his home. A spectator, Fred Goodwinski, was struck by a stray bullet and died yesterday. The daughter-in-law died last night. Patrolman Leo Tyrrell was also wounded but his condition is not serious.

De Capua, who was shot in the abdomen before being captured, made an attempt to escape from the hospital Monday night and was shot again in the leg by a police guard. He is reported to be recovering and probably will be transferred to the county jail within a few days.

WATERS LAD RESCUES YOUTH

Goes to Assistance of Clarence Boston in Mid-stream.

Delmyr Waters, 19, Pleasant Heights, played the role of a hero in the rescue of Clarence Boston, 13; from drowning in the Ohio river at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, it developed today. He was assisted by Captain B. F. Wynn, of Chester, who in a John-tub rowed the boys to shore.

Young Waters, who had accompanied his father, W. J. Waters, plane tuner, to Smiths Ferry, had gone to the river for a swim while his father was working at the Hagar home. He was accompanied by one of the Hagar boys.

The lads swam to the West Virginia side and were about three-fourths of the way back to the Ohio shore when they heard the shouts of Paul Gildue, 10, who had been swimming with the Boston lad.

Gildue, a swimmer, had been unable to untangle an inflated inner tube which had become fastened around Boston's legs when Waters heard his cry for help. Waters hurried to the rescue of Boston, whose head was being held under the water by the inner tube and succeeded in removing the tube from the boy's legs.

Wynn, who had been fishing in the river near the mouth of the creek, rowed to the scene of the struggle and, instructing the Boston boy to hold to the side of the boat, brought him ashore.

MRS. LYDIA DE BEE FUNERAL HERE

A daughter, Mrs. Alex Auld, of Alliance, and three sisters survive.

RESCUE VESSEL SENDS MESSAGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The following message, telling of the efforts of the S. S. Transylvania to reach the spot where the New York-to-Rome monoplane Old Glory broadcast an appeal for help, was sent to the Radio Corporation of America early today by Captain Bone of the liner:

"The Transylvania is now 83 miles from the plane and owing to the pitch darkness it will be difficult to see the plane. As soon as picked up will report to you. Fresh westerly winds and sea. Have altered course 150 degrees."

FIRE DAMAGES POTTERY SHED

Blaze Causes $500 Loss at K. T. K. Plant.

Damage estimated at approximately $500 resulted early today when fire broke out in the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery straw shed in Bradshaw avenue.

The blaze was discovered by the nightwatchman at 5:15 o'clock. Firemen from the No. 1 and No. 3 stations, who answered the alarm, found the fire near the roof of the building. About a ton of the baled straw was damaged by fire, while several tons were damaged by water.

The origin of the fire has not been determined.

A children's "shanty" near the home of Clarence Laughlin, Oak street, was destroyed by fire at 10:30 o'clock last night. The origin of the blaze, which involved a loss of $50, was not determined.

SIX MOTORISTS PAY FINES HERE

Six traffic violators, nabbed by the police over the holiday and week-end, drew fines of $1 and costs when they faced Municipal Judge Hanley in police court today.

Ronald Woerner, Edward Brown and Paul Hetzel were charged with fast and reckless driving, while George Brock, Wellsville, Ray Green and C. M. Bukett, both of East Liverpool, were held on charges of reckless driving in connection with the riding of four passengers in one seat. They were arrested in East End by Patrolman Leslie Curran.

George Lafferty, also arrested by Curran, charged with operating a motor vehicle without lights, was dismissed. There has been no disposition of the charge against Carter Tucker, arrested by Captain Conley, Saturday, charged with the operation of a motor vehicle with one license plate.

KIWANIS PLANS FALL PROGRAM

Tomorrow's luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis club in the Larkins annex will take the form of a business session. Program of activities for the fall and winter will be outlined.

Ravenna Man on Trial for Murder. RAVENNA, O., Sept. 7.—Frank Mollica went on trial here today charged with murdering Clayton Apple, Kent merchant policeman who was killed in 1925.

Other Vessels Near Spot.

A number of other trans-Atlantic vessels are also near the spot where the Old Glory sent out the call for assistance.

The S. S. California, which was in communication with Old Glory shortly before midnight, when the plane was 200 miles east of Cape Race, also heard the plane's S. O. S. The captain of the California estimated the position of the plane as 51.21 north latitude and 40.48 west longitude.

DISASTER FEARED

Transylvania Reaches Point From Which Message Came.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The S. S. Transylvania has reached the point from which the crew of the trans-Atlantic monoplane "Old Glory" sent their hurried S. O. S. call for help early today, and no sign of the plane has yet been found.

"OLD GLORY" LOG ON OCEAN JUMP

1:45 p. m.—Passed over Popham Beach, Maine, coast guard station, forty miles from Old Orchard.

3:00 p. m.—Passed over Penobscot bay, 115 miles from Old Orchard.

3:55 p. m.—St. Johns New Brunswick, picked up message from Old Glory's radio, stating "making 100 miles an hour—Well."

5:00 p. m.—Canadian steamer Empress reported sighting plane in Bay of Fundy.

6:10 p. m.—Old Glory sighted over Parrsboro, Cumberland county, N. S.

7:00 p. m.—Plane seen over North Sydney, Cape Breton.

9:30 p. m.—Old Glory messaged U. S. liner George Washington it was over New Foundland, going well.

10:50 p. m.—Old Glory reported passing over Burlington, N. F.

11:15 p. m.—Plane reported passing over Cape Race.

September 7.—12:57 a. m.—S. S. California radioed, plane passed over ship 200 miles east of Cape Race.

3:09 a. m.—Old Glory sent S. O. S. when 500 miles east of New Foundland.

Search Continued.

This was revealed shortly before noon today when Captain David Bone of the liner reported by wireless to the International News service.

Captain Bone stated that although no sign of the missing plane had been found, he was continuing the search, circling about the spot in the Atlantic wastes from which the last call came.

After criss-crossing and circling the area within the thirty mile radius of the position given without finding any trace of the plane, Captain Bone headed his ship toward the point at which Old Glory was sighted by the S. S. California, 350 miles east of New Foundland, he stated.

"At 1:30 G. M. T. (10:30 A. M. Eastern daylight time) position 49:33 north 41:15 west, have searched area thirty miles around this position without results, now proceeding toward point in which plane seen by California stop have advised all ships," he wirelessed.

Sea Reported Rough.

Hope that the plane would be able to remain afloat for any length of time was practically shattered by the captain's statement that the sea was rough, and being whipped up by a fresh west by south wind.

"At 8:17, G. M. T., Wednesday heard signal from plane WRHP, Old Glory airplane," Captain Bone reported in his radio. The call merely said: "S. O. S. five hours out of New Foundland, east."

"The Transylvania proceeded immediately toward estimated position," the captain's dispatch continued. "Position estimated as latitude 49:30 north longitude 41:00 west. No further signals were heard. Am continuing search. Fresh west by south wind and rough sea prevailing. Barometer 29.50 rising slowly. Bone."

Carried Life Raft.

Captain Bone's statement that the hurried message from Old Glory gave the plane's position as "five hours out of Newfoundland, east," was the first indication that Lloyd Bertand and James D. Hill, the pilots, had been able to do more than flash the dread S. O. S. call.

It was regarded as impossible for Old Glory, a land plane, to remain afloat in a heavy sea for more than a few minutes. The equipment however, included a rubber boat and a life raft.

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO.

The latter, after a quick glance around the room, leaned against the wall and nodded to John. "Don't let me interrupt," he said.

John Moore turned to Rodriguez. "Why did Henshaw kill Clench?" he asked.

Rodriguez shrugged his sullen face scowling at the floor. "How do I know he killed him?" he muttered. "Then you can tell what you do know to the police!"

"Then you can tell what you do know to the police!"

The heavy-lidded eyes lifted. "The police can't touch me!" he said insolently. "I did not kill them, and anyway, they were killed in Mexico."

"The police," said John Moore deliberately, "can and will hold you in prison until your own government hears of these guns you are buying, unless—" he paused. "Unless we can arrange this affair to my entire satisfaction, out of court."

It was Poker-Face Moore speaking. And it was Morton who answered. "Speak up, Rodriguez."

"Why," demanded John again, "did Henshaw kill Clench?"

Rodriguez' eyes shifted to the white-clad bride and back to John. "Because Clench—tried to tell about her."

Five men moved forward. "Wait!" said John Moore. "What about her?"

"What he was going to do with her."

"Ruth," began John. "No, no!" cried Ruth. "I must know. Oh, don't you see!"

"Let her stay, Joe!" exclaimed Stuart Long, and John, glancing quickly in his direction, nodded acquiescence.

"What did Henshaw plan? And when?"

"To take the Senorita away that night."

"Ah!" commented John, as one beginning to see light.

"He had given her to me. You made trouble—and so he planned to send her to Altar—that night; and keep her there 'til you went away."

"Ah," said John, "I was a fool not to guess! And Clench tried to tell me that."

"You had the money," sneered Rodriguez.

"And then, by Jove, when he couldn't find me he tried to warn Miss Henshaw!"

"St!" Rodriguez snickered with the ugly whites of his eyes showing. "And she called her uncle! He fixed him quick."

"That isn't true, that isn't true!" Ruth called out. "Don't believe that man!"

She stood clasping John's arm, pleading with him desperately. "He couldn't have been so vile—my uncle—he couldn't! He was hard up and worried, I know, but he couldn't Clench—that night—I told him about Clench's annoying me in Tubutama; don't you see he was angry with him about me! And then he didn't want me mixed up in it—the murder part—that's why he was taking me away. When Weng stopped him—oh! But he was furiously angry you see—"

"You're right, Ruth," said Stuart Long suddenly, in loud, clear tones. "Your uncle was out of his head; that's the truth. I know, see? because I've been with him since about two o'clock this morning."

"You have!" cried Ruth. "Where?" asked John, sharply.

But Stuart spoke only to the girl. "After you and Joe were asleep last night, Beechy and I took some gas to a car on the Sasabe road. It was your uncle with a chauffeur and the other guy Joe shot in the arm. We started the two Mexicans walking back to Mexico, and I arrested your uncle—"

I'm a deputy sheriff. Beechy dropped off in Arivaca in case the rest of his gang turned up; and I picked up the two men we'd left on guard while we were gone and started for Tucson."

"Beechy didn't tell us!" exclaimed the girl.

"I know. We decided on that before I left. We didn't know just what would happen, and we didn't want you to worry any more than you had to."

"Where—where is he now?"

"I'm coming to that. At Amado I sent back word by Juan for you all to come on into Tucson."

"And you?"

"Yes. Your uncle had been out of his head or he wouldn't have hurt anyone—we all know that. Why, sure we do. We've been his friends for years."

Well, just about the time we were nearing Tucson he began to realize, I guess, what he'd done. And it knocked him all out. And—well, look Ruth, he did the only thing a decent man could do—if he came to—and found he'd killed two men. He killed himself."

There was not a sound in that room. Every man was watching the girl John stirred as if to go to her; but Beechy's hand clasped like a vice on his arm.

Then Ruth spoke to Stuart. "He is dead?"

"Yes."

"And—he killed himself—because he realized—what he'd done?"

"Absolutely," said Stuart, steadily. "Then he wasn't—as vile as that man said?"

"No, of course he wasn't."

"Oh, thank God!" she turned to John. "You see? You think that, too?"

"Of course," said John Moore as steadily as Stuart had. But when he would have approached her she held up her hand. "Let me tell Stuart, what I want done—about him, will you? Stew will do it. And then we need not refer to him again for a long time! Could we do that? Could we?"

"We can do everything you wish to, girl. Tell Stew if you like. He'll do it."

Ruth and Stuart walked to the window of the big room and John Moore turned to Beechy.

"Well?" said the latter, noncommittally.

John Moore stared at him. "Listen," he said, "if I'd hunted the world over Beechy, I doubt if I could have found a man less likely to suffer remorse and commit suicide—"

Beechy chuckled. "Suicide!" he said, softly, admiringly. "Stew's a poet!"

"Ah!" said John Moore. "Then it wasn't?"

"In a way it was. This side of Amado he did grab a gun from Richy—but Stew shot first. Stew usually does. When criminals get gay with Stew, the deputy sheriff—you might call it suicide."

"I guessed it was something like that," said John.

"But Ruth mustn't!"

"Never! But we are both deeply indebted to him!"

"O rot," said Beechy. "The thing he did was his business to do. The suicide part was a wedding present to Ruth."

Morton had approached. "Poker-Face, what do you want me to do?"

"My name is Moore—with Mr. before it when you speak to me."

"That's all right, Mr. Moore," said Morton. "Of course the—ah, the little gun deal is off with Henshaw dead."

"Or alive," said John shortly.

"But look, Mr. Moore—I didn't know that Miss Henshaw was what she is. Henshaw sent me her picture. I've got letters where he says—"

"You'll forget what he said. And I don't want to hear. Those letters will be sent to me at the Engineers Club this week—or you'll hear from some letters I brought up from Mexico. However, I owe you a lot in a way. I'll hold you responsible for Rodriguez. Get out of here and take him with you."

"Fate," said Beechy, so softly that Morton barely heard it and was startled to find Beechy close beside him.

"Cracked ice!" boomed a voice, and there was Tower on the other side. "March!"

The door was shut with ceremony upon Morton and Rodriguez.

"That's that," said Beechy. "Give me a cigarette."

John crossed to the Ambassador.

East Liverpool and Chester Contractors Submit Bids of $34,980 and $35,985, Respectively.

Two bids for the new municipal building which will be erected at the corner of Fourth street and Carolina avenue, were received by city council last night.

The bid of Finley Brothers, Chester contractors, was $35,985, while that of Winland Brothers, of East Liverpool, was $34,980. The bids were referred to the building committee, Councilmen Charles Davis, John Hobbs and John Patton, who will confer with the contractors and architect before council meets in adjourned session next Monday evening when the contract will be awarded.

The bid of Finley Brothers, it is said, included steel doors for the vaults which was not provided for in the estimate of the Winland company. The East Liverpool contractors, however, included the premium on the surety bond, which it is claimed was not considered in the estimate of the local builders. Different estimates on the number of brick to be used in the structure were also used by the two firms.

The structure will occupy a tract on the north side of Carolina avenue, at the corner of Fourth street, recently purchased from Attorney William Ingram and others. The building will have a frontage of 60 feet on Carolina avenue and will be about 84 feet in depth. It will have a full basement.

It is planned to use the second or top floor as an auditorium, suitable for basketball games and meetings. Cell rooms, council chamber offices for city officials and quarters for the fire department will be on the first floor.

Chester electors recently approved a $40,000 bond issue for the city hall. This includes the purchase price of the site, cost $3,000.

The successful bidder will be asked to begin work on the building as soon as possible in order to have the structure under roof before cold weather sets in.

Geren today was said to be recovering. The cause of his alleged attempt to commit suicide was not learned by police.

Old Glory's Hop For Rome

An S. O. S., purporting to have come from the intrepid fliers, Lloyd Bertaud and James De Witt and their passenger, Philip Payne, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror and representative of William Randolph Hearst, sponsor of the flight, indicated early today that the New York-to-Rome hop of Old Glory is in danger of failure.

Two radio messages, flashing a hint of the peril of the trans-Atlantic airmen, were received by the Radio Corporation of America from the steamers Carmania and Lapland. No details were given. Four hours prior to the receipt of the S. O. S. the plane was reported 200 miles east of Cape Race Newfoundland. On the basis of Old Glory's average speed of 100 miles an hour the plane was 500 miles out at sea when the call for help was sent.

Lindbergh told the French people, who mourn the loss of Nungesser and Coli, that flying the Atlantic eastward was much easier than flying it westward. However, recent events show that the eastern hop is no child's play. Westbound Europeans, who failed in the attempts to repeat the achievement of our eastbound American fliers, were driven back by contrary winds, storms and fogs or were lost at sea.

The reasons are made plain by statements from the British weather office in London. The whole year round conditions are against such flights. The wind in the north temperate zone, over the Atlantic, is perpetually from the west. "It is variable, its currents veering from southwest to direct west, then northwestward, but always fliers from Europe will encounter this wind."

The fog bank along the most direct course between the two continents is likewise a hostile factor. At times it spreads from Newfoundland to cover the whole ocean, as when Commander Byrd flew across. Planes flying far to the south may take advantage, no doubt, of the same trade winds which facilitate water navigation from east to west, but near the equator the Atlantic is so broad that the length of the "hop" makes that course no less difficult.

Perhaps these obstacles will be overcome in time, as others have been. Man is determined to complete his conquest of the air. But in the present state of aviation it is clear that anyone flying west instead of east is attempting the practically impossible. A knowledge of this fact, along with a natural revulsion against "stunt" flights by sea, should cut down the lamentable loss of life among air pioneers recently.

Clarinet And Awls

Uncle Sam doubtless means well, in his immigration work as elsewhere, but sometimes his judgment is none too good. For instance, in the case of Vincenzo Gentile.

Vincenzo came to America from Italy four years ago as a clarinet player and saxophone player. Being a musician, he was admitted without regard to his country's quota, as an "artist." All went well until he fell in love with an American girl two years ago, and married her. She was a fine girl, and daughter of a shoemaker. She persuaded Vincenzo to leave the more or less musical bunch he traveled around with, and take up her father's occupation. In two years he had qualified as a good cobbler.

Then somebody tipped off to the immigration authorities his change of occupation, and he was deported because as a shoemaker he had to be included in the regular Italian quota, and the quota was filled up. His wife, though American-born, could do nothing for him.

Doubtless it's legal enough, and all that. But, human considerations aside, Uncle Sam ought to know that this country needs shoemakers more than clarinet and saxophone players.

Celestial Awe

A dispatch from Shanghai records the fact that many Chinese have been burning joss in the temples to ward off any evil which may be heading their way. They have observed the unusual brilliancy of the planet Venus in recent weeks and have been terrified by it.

We may smile at their superstition, but we must admit that at least they observed the shining beauty of the planet. Nature observers here have written of it in recent weeks. But how many of us, driving at night, or vacationing in the country where our opportunities to watch the sky were exceptional, have given a little time to looking at this wondrous sight? If we know more than the Chinese in not fearing a glorious spectacle in the sky, are we not almost more stupid than they in our indifference to celestial glories?

Hookworm Conquered

The Rockefeller Foundation announces that the hookworm disease has now almost disappeared from the United States and is rapidly being brought under control in many other parts of the world. Thus another great plague, one of the worst affecting the human race, is passing away.

It is only a few years since the nature of this disease was discovered and its ravages appreciated. Tens of millions in tropical and subtropical regions had their vitality sapped by a minute parasite entering the human body from the soil. Usually the victims did not know what was wrong with them. Neither did society, which called them "lazy and worthless." Several millions of such victims have been treated and made well again, and with their returning vigor have come prosperity and respectability.

The quiet ministrations of the hookworm-fighters have had much to do with the economic revival of our own South. The good work goes on, creeping around the earth—a remarkable triumph of medical science.

To Be Nearer The Source of Supply—

By Fontaine Fox

FOR THE SAKE OF CONVENIENCE, OLD MAN SIMON WHO SELLS SECOND HAND AUTO PARTS HAS MOVED HIS PLACE OF BUSINESS DOWN BY THE UNPROTECTED R.R. CROSSING.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Broadway is almost an unknown land to men whose fingers are in easy reach of heavy cash. If they want diversion they must seek it elsewhere. They are not permitted to indulge the pleasures of night clubs or other haunts of high rollers.

The banking world especially looks upon the White Way as a subtle temptress. Too many trusted employees have led exemplary lives for years and then looked upon Broadway when it was white. They are next heard of in some non-extraditable country growing beards.

And expert accountants are called in to add up the deficit. If gentlemen of the counting houses wish to have their little frolic now and then they must seek sequestered islands off the beaten path. The myth has grown that Broadway is dynamite.

The espionage of men entrusted with huge sums is greater than most people realize and even so every once in awhile the defalcation of some long trusted employee emblazons the front pages and it is usually traced back to Broadway and a blond.

So close is the watch it is related that a cashier recently was walking through 42d street. He was in a hurry to get into the next street and seeing a theatre opened out through it. It so happened a rehearsal was going on and he emerged among a bevy of beautiful girls at the stage door.

Some camera eye mentally kodaked the picture and next morning he was called before a solemn group of directors. It took him some time to explain the incident satisfactorily. Greater than the danger of the Circus is the danger of the gambling houses.

Gambling entrusts more men who handle cash than a seductive woman. Experience has shown employers few men can accept one loss and quit. The temptation to recover with the cash in such handy reach results in the usual disaster.

New York has recently been declared a "foreign city" which is another apparent to pointing native sons. It is pointed out by one of those gentlemen who speak on first pages under large sets of themselves that the metropolis contains more Irish than Dublin, more Germans than any German city save Berlin and Hamburg, more Greeks than Athens, more Italians than any city in Italy outside of Rome, and almost ten percent of the Jewish population of the earth. And doubtless more hill-billys than Arkansas.

New York is one city never affected by criticism. The people who love it most are generally its severest critics. It continues to broaden, shoot up and prosper in face of everything.

In about six months those of us who have become pop-eyed gazing at ponderous sky brushing towers will behold a new architectural atrocity. It is the Larkin building which is going up on 42d street between 8th and 9th avenues. It will rise dizzily 1,200 feet in the air which is—wait a minutes—yes, just exactly 267 feet higher than Eiffel Tower. There will be 110 stories and 61 elevators which should satisfy almost anyone who likes their grand buildings tall.

The Graybar building, at this writing, is the most spacious office structure in town. A sight seeing wagon megaphonist passing it the other day announced: "This is where a stenographer can shoot the boss and arrive in China before they find the body."

The Better Service nuisance has hit many of the big buildings about town. One in particular in British fashion has an "Enquiry Office" where a gorgeous Major Domo sits on sort of a throne and answers foolish questions. He seems to regard every question a personal affront—and after listening to some inquiries one can scarcely blame him. One man, for Growth of the Air Mail.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—With the air buzzing with the drone of airplane propellers as it never has before, the United States government, through the agency of the Post Office Department, has not been backward. Private enterprise, as represented by such epoch-making flights as those of Lindbergh and Chamberlain, has been very much to the fore in the last few months but credit must be accorded the government for adding to the record of achievement by perfecting the air mail service to a point where Col. Lindbergh himself said, on his return from Paris, that "Europe looks with reverence on the American air mail service."

The country now is covered with a network of air mail lines which operate in all kinds of weather and at all seasons of the year. They have speeded up mail delivery to a phenomenal degree and the development still progresses.

The first air mail route established by the Post Office Department was the Washington-New York line. This was instituted May 18, 1918. It proved successful and also taught the Post Office that the most practical use of the airplane in mail delivery was in long flights, the shorter hops proving impractical because of the time lost in taking mail from the air fields to the post offices for ultimate distribution.

It was not until 1921 that the first transcontinental lines were established. At first night flying was not attempted. The planes would speed the mail forward in the daylight hours, but at nightfall would turn over their pouches to the railways. At dawn they would be taken up again by the planes which were kept stationed at convenient distances along the railway routes. This system cut the usual ninety hour coast to coast railway mail time in half.

But the Post Office Department was not satisfied by this halfway method of air transport of the mails. In 1922 a laboratory was established for the study of night flying. Experts in illumination, beacons, land lighthouses, instance, asked why the foyer clock was a minute too fast. Another wanted to know where he might secure a second-hand dictionary.

houses, etc., were called in and exhaustive experiments conducted. The air mail pilots—and Col. Lindbergh was one of them—were called upon for advice as to what they would regard as necessary to make night flying practical.

The First Lighted Airway.

It was not until the summer of 1923 that a lighted airway was established over the plains of Wyoming. The beacons were first placed there because of the scarcity of cities in the plains region. In the east there were lighted cities to guide the way, but on the plains there was nothing but the occasional camp fire of the cowboy or the cry of the coyote which was drowned by the hum of the propeller. In August, 1923, flights were made from New York to San Francisco. The best result of these test flights was a record of 26 hours and 14 minutes between New York and San Francisco as opposed to the train time of 90 hours. In successive, regular flights, the time was always under 30 hours, a third of the train time.

Experimenting continued for some time and finally in July, 1924, a regular service was inaugurated. The mail rate first was fixed at 24 cents an ounce between New York and San Francisco, but later this was cut to 20 cents an ounce.

Meantime, the Post Office Department was extending its series of beacons in both directions from Wyoming; that is, towards New York and toward San Francisco.

The next step was the establishment of regular air mail service, overnight, between New York and Chicago.

By this time most of the experimental work had been done and Congress authorized the Postmaster General to contract with commercial lines for the carrying of the mails. In February, 1926, a contract was closed with a commercial company for the transportation of the mails between Detroit and Cleveland on one route and between Detroit and Chicago on another.

On July 1 of this year the Post Office Department finally gave up its own service and let contracts to private companies. Now the air mail is handled entirely by these companies and the Post Office Department is wholly out of the business. The whole country is interlaced with a network of contract air lines. A map of these lines looks almost like a railway map of the United States. The New York San Francisco line alone covers some 2,627 miles in a direct air line while all of the various branch lines make up an impressive total of thousands of miles.

As Regular as Train Service.

The air mail leaves New York daily at 11 o'clock, in the morning and reaches San Francisco at 4:30 o'clock on the afternoon of the following day. It leaves San Francisco at 8:15 o'clock in the morning of each day and arrives at New York at 6 o'clock on the afternoon of the next day. This service is as regular as train service, no matter what the weather may be.

The planes stop at many places and discharge and receive mail from connecting lines, air and rail alike. It has taken time to educate business men to use the air mail but they are doing so increasingly.

For its work in giving regular night flying to the world and perfecting the system of beacons the Post Office Department has received the cherished Collier trophy which is conferred by the National Aeronautical Association. It also received this trophy two years in succession for maintaining a full year's operation on regular schedule of its air mail lines. And this year's operation was completed without a single fatal accident.

The Post Office Department itself originally and now the privately operated lines which hold the contracts, have the cooperation of the Department of Commerce in carrying on their work. Just as this Department governs the Lighthouse Service which protects life and property at sea by illuminating dangerous shoals and pointing the way to port with beacons of light, so it now has control of the land lighthouses which mark the pathway for the mail flier or any other aviator who has the temerity to brave the gloom of night in long flights. The Department of Commerce also cooperates in the control of the radio service which enables the Post Office Department to keep in touch with its fliers while they are in the air and to intercommunicate between the several landing fields which have been established.

There are now nineteen regularly established flying routes, some of them traversing vast distances. Each year will see additions to the mileage covered and the privately owned lines also are permitted to carry passengers.

TODAY

A MILLION DOLLARS, once an important sum, is now "small change" in the eyes of high finance. You must be a BILLION dollar concern to be anything. The recent combination of the Chase National and the Mechanics and Metals National Banks produced a bank with assets of one thousand two hundred and fifteen million dollars. The ten billion dollar bank will come in due time. This is a billion dollar country, and hasn't really started the development of the national wealth.

BEERY, HATTON IN COMEDY HIT

"Firemen, Save My Child," Scores at Ceramic.

Laughs, more laughs and then some more, without interruption until one's sides really ache. That, in a line, sums up the newest fun masterpiece of Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton "Firemen, Save My Child" now at the Ceramic theatre.

This new picture, beyond question, places Beery and Hatton at the absolute top rung of the screen comedy. When Paramount took these two players, who for years had been portraying villain roles before the camera, and linked them in "Behind the Front" they started the world with their laugh-provoking capabilities; when the boys followed this success with "We're in the Navy Now" they scored a greater triumph.

Now, in "Firemen, Save My Child" their comedy team work has ripened into a fulfillment that has produced a humor classic, the greatest of all their pictures, the funniest film ever made by a comedy duo.

It is superfluous to describe their antics as they blundered involuntarily into the army and then the navy, so now they are catapulted from an 85-foot tower into the fire department and they proceed to reveal all the hidden mysteries of the lives of firemen in a ludicrous succession of adventures that, even in the moments when the flames are hottest and the fire burning at its fiercest in the climatic sequence of the picture, arouses hilarious roars.

There is a well-defined plot in "Firemen, Save My Child" that builds from the opening sequences through the big fire scene when they prove themselves real (if laughable) heroes, to the final fadeout.

HARRY LANGDON RINGS BELL

"Long Pants," Now at American, is Laugh Epic.

Technicolor photography, long regarded as sacred to the heavier drama, has been brought to screen comedy by Harry Langdon in his new laugh epic, "Long Pants," now at the American.

Upsetting precedent and tradition in his determination to make his pictures definitely "different," the whimsical, sad-eyed star has taken another revolutionary step by filming one complete sequence of his new laugh special in natural color.

The process involved a tremendous expenditure of time, but Langdon believes the result has more than justified the expense.

Theatre-goers, who have seen color photography only in melo-dramatic screen productions of the past two years, will be interested in knowing something of the enormous mass of detail necessary to successful color filming.

Technicolor film is taken with special cameras, and by special cameramen. A crew of the latter invaded the Langdon sets at the First National studios and spent two weeks before a foot of film was taken. They conferred with Langdon's technicians on the advisability of using certain colors, and spent considerable time in experimental work with lighting and color schemes.

An enormous set, one of the most elaborate ever built for comedy purposes, was erected for the technicolor sequence. It represented a medieval castle, complete with moat, courtyard and garden. Fullgrown fruit trees were erected in the garden, and by the magic of the movies "back-stage" wizardry, were made to bloom although the date was mid-December.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The railroad stocks jumped into prominence as the leaders of the forward move in prices at the beginning of trading today. The usual procession of "new highs" in the industrial, railroad and public utility stocks carried U. S. Steel, General Motors, General Electric, New York Central and about a dozen other well known stocks to the highest levels in the history of the respective companies.

Industrial stocks with favorable dividend records or prospective dividend increases were eagerly bid upward at the start, and the first period witnesses an unprecedented scale of market valuations of most of the well known stocks. U. S. Steel gained more than a point to sell at 149 1/2; while General Motors rose above 253; New York Central to 161; General Electric to 146 1/2; Colorado Fuel and Iron made a new 4 point gain at 87 1/2; while Kresge, Woolworth and other of the mercantile stocks sold higher. Consolidated gas at the head of the local utility stocks, raced up 3 1/2 points to 117 1/2 in active trading.

Once again the rise in the aggregate of brokers loans to record breaking totals, as revealed in the monthly report of the stock exchange, was ignored in the financial district, and an ultimate advance from the present total of $3,641,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 (or more) freely predicted. Estimates of August net railroad earnings were more favorable than the actual July exhibits' though not as high as those of the same month last year. Call money rates were unchanged at 3 1/2 per cent, and commodity markets were steady.

FOUR SLAIN AS MAN "SHOOT UP" LAW OFFICE

Fifth Injured in Gun Play in New York.

SUSPECT HELD

Baltimore Merchant Says He "Protected His Family."

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—"When the real story comes out, I'll be admired by everybody for what I did in protection of my family."

This was all Charles Bernstein, proprietor of a women's apparel shop in Baltimore, Md., would say today as he was locked up at police headquarters on a murder charge after having "shot up" a New York City law office resulting in the death of four persons and injuries to a fifth.

From other sources, the police were informed that the shooting was the result of a petty real estate transaction involving only a few hundred dollars. Bernstein acted under the belief he was tricked in the deal, it was said.

The shooting occurred in the law offices of Bijur, Herts, and Steinberg. The dead:

Charles J. Herkowitz, 38, a real estate broker with offices in Fifth avenue.

Victor J. Steinberg, 29, a member of the firm in which offices the shooting took place and Bernstein's lawyer.

Henry C. Cohen, 40, lawyer, with offices in Fifth avenue.

Robert McGrorty, 29, stage manager.

The injured:

John Steinloff, 19, a post office clerk.

Four men, including Bernstein, met in the ninth floor office to discuss a real estate dispute involving $500. Bernstein had come from Baltimore to sit in at the conference. He was offered a chair at a table around which Herkowitz, Cohen and Steinberg were grouped.

After a few minutes discussion, voices were raised and, then came the roar of revolver shots.

Man Plunges Into Space.

Miss Sara Blum, a stenographer, saw Steinberg run to the window, and then plunge into space.

Herkowitz ran into the hallway, Bernstein, smoking gun in hand after him. Bernstein, the police were told, sent a bullet into the fleeing Herkowitz's back.

Then Bernstein turned and shot Cohen three times. Gun, in hand, he fled.

Steinberg's body was found in the street. Before it hit the pavement it struck McGrorty, the stage manager, and caromed off Steinloff, another pedestrian.

McGrorty died in Bellevue hospital today from a fractured spine.

This remarkable varnish stain excels in 3 ways...

Drop in and let us prove it to your satisfaction...

The Color Test: Fifty experts chose Miracolor as the line of color that reproduced most closely their conception of the true hardwood tones.

The Application Test: Under an actual brushing test you will find that Miracolor flows freely, and shows no laps or brush marks.

The Durability Test: Apply varnish stain to a metal panel. Bend it over a straight edge. Then straighten and examine it. An inefficient varnish stain will be badly cracked. Miracolor will remain an unbroken film. This bending test proves the elasticity and durability of the product.

Do you wonder that we guarantee it to give satisfaction when applied according to directions.

WELLSVILLE SOLONS O. K. THREE SEWER MEASURES

$18,000 BOND PROPOSAL GOES TO FALL VOTE

Seventeenth Street Work Awaits Electors' Decision.

EMERGENCY ACTS

Council Sanctions Plan for Drainage System Here.

Completing what was termed by Mayor W. L. Fogo as "the best night's work that they have done for a long time," Wellsville city council last night passed three sewer and construction ordinances, all as emergency measures, one of which, in the form of a bond issue, will go to the people at the Nov. 8 election.

First ordinance approved by the solons provides for the $5,000 Twentieth street sewer job.

The second is designed to effect improvements aggregating probably $7,500 in sewers and drains from Eighteenth to Twenty-third streets.

The third measure was a resolution of necessity for the $18,000 Seventeenth street sewer, and this will be submitted to the electorate for their approval or rejection.

The first and second measures were enacted under provisions of recent state legislation which permits the issuance of notes in anticipation of the issuance of bonds.

The statute makes it possible for the city to issue notes and pay for the work as it is being done, and then issue bonds to cover the exact cost of the work.

The three bills were approved as emergency measures in order that immediate action can be taken. It will be necessary to submit the Seventeenth street issue to the county board of deputy supervisors of elections at once so that it may be placed on the ballot.

The sewer, as proposed in the resolution, will be 1,050 feet long, and will be taken under the railroad tracks to the river.

The drainage area in the territory from Eighteenth to Twenty-third and from Buckeye avenue to Clark avenue will be taken care of in the $7,500 project, a number of sewers and drains being scheduled for attention.

As a result of the several readings on each measure and bond issue certification steps, requiring an unusually large amount of readings, approximately an hour was necessary to complete action on the bills.

At the close, Mayor Fogo arose and congratulated the solons. "This is necessary legislation," he pointed out. "It will relieve long suffering taxpayers in the west end of the city and will be beneficial also in that it will afford work to men who need it."

The mayor also suggested to council that an ordinance be brought in to keep City Engineer R. D. McGill on the job. He expressed himself as highly pleased with McGill's work, and solicited Lauck's cooperation in the Lisbon road improvement operations, largely under the direction of the engineer, as a "superior piece of work."

Gas in the Stomach Is Truly Dangerous

Gas, Pain, Bloating and a feeling of fullness after eating are almost certain evidence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach.

Too much acid irritates the delicate stomach lining, frequently causing chronic gastritis and dangerous ulcers. Food ferments and sours, forming a gas that distends the stomach and often seriously affects the heart.

It is genuine folly to neglect such a condition or to treat with artificial digestive aids that cannot neutralize the stomach acid. A better way is to get from your druggist some Blaud's Magnesia (powder or tablets) and take a little after each meal. This famous but simple and inexpensive stomach-sweetener and anti-acid can be depended upon to prove its value in less than five minutes. In most instances, relief comes instantly! Pleasant and perfectly harmless to use—Blaud's Magnesia does give wonderful relief in nine out of ten cases. Ask your Doctor or Druggist.

CITY BUDGET GETS APPROVAL

Eckfeld Estimates Municipal Needs at $77,200.

City's budget needs for next year, amounting to $77,200, prepared by City Auditor Fred Eckfeld, was approved by solons at last night's meeting and will be submitted to county authorities. The budget gives the municipality approximately $3,000 more than last year's.

Council committee named recently to consider plans for the painting of electric light poles here, announced that the company was willing to paint the poles in either of two colors, green or black. The committee recommended the use of the green paint and its report was accepted.

Questioned regarding poor sanitary conditions in Buckeye avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets, council asserted that recommendations from the board of health were necessary preliminary to action.

Manager Frank Swaney, of the Ohio Bell Telephone company, in a communication, proposed relocation of a telephone pole at the corner of Third and Broadway, which, it was said, was interfering with business at the Madden gasoline station, and said he would be willing to confer with city representatives to work out the best possible plan for the advantage of all concerned.

Mayor's reports for July and August, showing collections of $233.40 and $292, respectively, were approved by council.

COUNCIL VOTES POWER GRANT

Fifty-year Franchise Plan Goes on First Reading.

Ordinance granting franchise rights to the Ohio Power company for a period of 50 years was approved by city council on first reading last night.

The measure was discussed with the solons by Attorney W. H. Vodrey, counsel for the company, and Ralph Couch, manager.

The only point in the ordinance on which solons asked time for thought was the 50-year period.

In reply to a question as to the reason for this length of time, Attorney Vodrey pointed out that the ordinary term in many places now is 50 years. In many instances ordinances passed a number of years ago are for an indefinite period of time. The newer ordinances, he said, specify 50 years.

This, he pointed out, does not invest exclusive rights in the Ohio Power company; it does not prohibit the city from dealing with other companies, if it so wishes.

But it does protect the company in its immense investments in equipment here, it was explained. Equipment placed in operation in the city costs more, undoubtedly, than initial rentals, explained Vodrey, and the duration of the franchise is the feature upon which the company sells bonds.

Approval of a long term franchise places the company in a better position to give service.

The power company, said Vodrey, is one of the largest establishments in the city, with an investment here of more than $250,000. The proposed franchise, he said, had nothing to do with rate questions, the city's 10-year contract taking care of this phase.

A list of more than 100 Ohio cities operating under 50-year franchises, was exhibited to council.

BEAVER JURORS PROBE 90 CASES

If the Chester squad wins the game, it also wins the second half pennant and qualifies for the final series with Laughlin for the championship. If Chester loses, it will be necessary to play one or two games on the schedule.

Soap and toilet preparations made in this country and sent abroad each month have an average value of nearly $1,400,000.

THE COMPLAINANT IS COGNAC PETE

FLAGG has had a good time. He believes he has returned to all the comforts that a home like Cognac Pete's can afford.

"This is the best war I ever attended," he boasts and settles down to a bottle of wine while Quirt looks on in disgust at the Captain's swaggering airs.

The coming of a messenger spoils the picture.

THE FINGER POINTS AT QUIRT

"Sir—civillian outside who complains of the behavior of some of the men with his daughter."

"Quirt, I warned these men about these French dolls." But the civillian complainant proves to be Cognac Pete. Then the Captain believes the trouble is of his own making. He speaks to Lieut. Moore:

"This frog is making a squawk. Try to square it." Pete's terms are marriage and 500 francs.

"Tell him I'll pay 300 francs, but the marriage is OUT."

"MY HEART IS MY OWN TO GIVE AWAY"

Then he seen on Quirt's arm the very garters he has given to Charmaine.

"Tell him to name the man."

The accusing finger is pointed at Quirt, and Pete goes to fetch Charmaine.

The tense situation is made tenser by orders to move into the lines.

"Bring the Mayor," says Flagg, tauntingly, "and we'll march Quirt off to war a bridegroom."

The Mayor arrives. The company stands as he reads from the book. Charmaine bursts into rage as the Mayor asks Quirt if he takes her.

"My heart is my own to give away—not to sell!" The odds are with Quirt this time, and he turns to Flagg:

"Sorry to disappoint you, Captain—but I seldom get married."

TEHERAN.—Persia's new wireless stations will be named by French experts in consequence of a decision of the Mejlis authorizing the Government to reject the offer of the services of Soviet experts.

The Soviet embassy here is said to resent deeply the action of the Persian authorities which they declare was entirely unexpected.

The refusal to take on Russians is said to be based on the fact that recently there has been much leakage of government information in the direction of Moscow, and the Persian government prefers to deliver Russian agents from temptation.

"Everybody atten-shun!" boomed Towner. "The wedding party is about to commence. Forward with the bride. Stop talking Stew. Say it with flowers. The dinner's coming here to this room."
"I couldn't eat; I'm sorry," began Ruth.
"You've got to eat something, girl. You need food."
"Aw, what's the nonsense!" Towner demanded. "I tell you this is a wedding party. I tended to the cake. Made 'em ice it with that Queen of Hearts you drew, Joe, on top! Told you you were lucky in love that night."
"Look, Ruth," begged Stuart, "you didn't really marry this guy, Joe, did you?"
"She did not!" put in Beechy with emphasis. "Joe attended to that little matter himself. I didn't see him write the marriage license, but I know he was the bride, the groom, the parson and the prayer book!"
"I suppose that kind of a guy will demand to sit by his own bride at table," grumbled Towner.
"Absolutely!" said John.
"And the other luck man," said Beechy, "is the man whom even Joe couldn't have won the world without."
"The Ambassador!" said John Moore.
When at last they put the cake before Ruth and told her to cut it, she turned to John. "Couldn't you cut it?"
"He's not the bride!"
The girl lifted the knife and made one incision. "There," she sighed. "I've cut it."
John Moore arose quickly. "You fellows send this wonderful cake on to us in New York, will you? This girl is dead tired. And we have to pack yet and make the train."
"You make a train!" scoffed Beechy in scorn. "You can't make a train; we'll put you on that train!"
Back again in the room where Ruth had dressed in her bridal gown, John closed the door. "Now, young lady, you are going to take a nap until train time. Not a word from you. You're dead-tired. I can see it."

John Morgan.

In the case of the National Tire & Rubber company, of East Palestine, against John Morgan and others, in an attachment action which was filed in common pleas court on July 2, the court has rendered judgment by default in favor of the plaintiff for $4,371 and costs.

The case of The Deming company, of Salem against Benjamin R. Hammond for the recovery of $143.30 and interest claimed due for machinery, machinery and repairs has been dismissed upon motion of the plaintiff, and at its costs.

The receiver was ordered to sell an automobile of the defendant in the case of the First National bank of East Palestine against Samuel White, and this case has been confirmed by the court.

There has been a hearing on the petition asking temporary alimony in the divorce case of Anna Anderson against her husband, Orpha Anderson, and the defendant has been ordered to pay his wife $50 temporary alimony within 30 days and, in addition, $10 per week for her support. The payments on the last order are to be made bi-weekly.

A temporary restraining order without bond has been allowed in the divorce case filed in common pleas court on Aug. 26 by Albert Wood against his wife, Eva Clair Wood. This cause will come up for hearing early in October.

Judgment by default for $405.82 in favor of the plaintiff has been awarded in the case of John Leaf against the Allied Oil company. This was an action in attachment.

In the case of Norman Shultz against John Shultz, an action for the recovery of $4,989.25 and interest, claimed to be due for work performed for the defendant and also lodging, the court has granted the defendant until Sept. 17 to file an answer.

Leave to the defendants to file an answer by Oct. 1 has been granted in the case of John Leykauf against Charles A. Butler and others. This is an action for the recovery of $1,153.81 and interest, and also for the for-sleep?"

"You are not to think about it, I told you! Lie down and I'll cover you up. I'll wake you in time. There! That's better than a damp saddle in a smelly little cave, isn't it?"
"That was a dear little cave," Ruth smiled at him sleepily from her pillow.

John Moore drew back. "Yes," he said quietly.
But the girl was fast asleep. Slowly the long train began to move. The man and girl on the observation platform leaned over the rail for the last handshakes.

"Goo' bye, Ruth! If you need us let us know!"
"If this Plute beats you or anything—"
"We'll see you in the spring!"
"Good bye, Joe!"
"Adios, Senorita-Senor!"
"Hasta Luego, Ambassador!"
"Good bye!"
"Good bye!"

Past the station and the little park where the pepper trees stirred in the night wind and a little Mexican dove, crooning, called to them from the shadows, "Who's that? Who's that? Who's that?"

The girl caught her breath and swayed nearer to the man beside her. His arm went around her.
"Hear that?" he asked. "Who's that? He's an impertinent bird and persistent. He has to know! He's calling to you. Why don't you answer him? Who are you anyway? Say it—Girl!"
"Ruth—Moore."
"That ought to satisfy him," said John. "It does me!"
"Does it?"
"Yes."
"Why are you whispering?"
"Because I am afraid I may wake up—somewhere else!"
"No you won't," said the girl very low. "I won't let you!"
Out across the desert and high overhead in the velvet sky shone the stars, the golden stars.

COURT GRANTS TWO DIVORCES

On the grounds of extreme cruelty and gross neglect of duty, Mrs. Rachel Dewees of Salem has been granted a decree of divorce from her husband, Joseph C. Dewees. The plaintiff has also had her maiden name, Rachel Williams, restored.

Flynn Bars Way to Dempsey Camp; Change of Weather Affects Gene

Leo's Guards Protect Ex-champ From Eyes of Curious; Jack Says "Let 'em in."

By George Barry.
CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—The iron fists of the iron-haired Leo protecting Flynn have built an iron cage around Jack Dempsey, and access to the ex-champion now is as difficult as it is to get an audience with the king of England.

And this condition seems to have been created without the knowledge of Dempsey who, having finally become smart to the situation has refused longer to a hermit and has yelled something about "lift those bars."

Around the camp of Dempsey at Lincoln field the managerial Flynn has tossed more safeguards than there are in Leavenworth prison. Amateur and professional cage crashers have made repeated efforts to get close enough to the ex-champion to yell to him a "hello" in the non-working hours.

But the net result of their labors has been to crash a dozen gates, elude a dozen guards and then drop from exhaustion and discouragement with the journey only half completed.

How vast has been the difference between the now and the olden golden days of Dempsey in training.

Jack Kearns never permitted the hoi polloi to over run a camp. Nor did Gene Normile, the later manager of the mauler from the Golden West. But they never secreted nor secluded Dempsey as 10,000 snapshots of Dempsey posed with some of the peasants will testify.

RECORDS GO TUMBLING IN HITFEST

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Babe Ruth, the well-known Sultan of swat, is on a home run rampage that has equalled his last year's record and threatens to break the great mark of 59 which he set in 1921. The Bambino pulled some world series stuff by clouting three homers in the New York-Boston double-header yesterday and increased his season's total to 47. One of them was one the longest wallop he has ever made.

Buster Gehrig hit No. 45 before Ruth got started yesterday, but Gehrig's lead was only a temporary one. Ruth's three homers put him two ahead of the Buster. Gehrig, however, collected five hits in addition to his circuit clout.

Ruth is still seven homers behind his 1921 record, and needs thirteen more this season to set a new mark. The Yankees have made 133 homers this season, breaking the modern record of 134 which they set in 1921. The all-time record of 140 made by the Cubs in 1884, may also fall today.

With 253 extra bases on hits to his credit, Gehrig has tied Ruth's record and may surpass it today. Four other world's records made by Ruth in 1921 probably will be shattered by the Buster before the end of the season. They are for total bases, extra base hits, runs driven in, and runs scored.

Blues Bet on Him

Bill Wambegans, former big leaguer, is considered the main spring of the whirlwind attack of the Kansas City Blues which is causing that team to be the sensation of the American Association.

Well, Donie Won't Lose Job, Anyway

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Manager Donie Bush will send his players against the Reds with renewed confidence today, for he knows he will not lose his job no matter what happens this season. He has signed to manage the club for another year.

Bush's confidence was strengthened further by the impressive performance turned in by Pitcher Ray Kremer yesterday. Kremer held the Reds to three hits and whitewashed them, 5 to 0. With Traynor and Smith leading the attack, the Bucs tagged Jalie May for 13 hits.

Bush's first move after signing a contract, incidentally, was to send Adam Comorosky, a rookie to the outfield in place of the much-fined Kiki Cuyler.

The Pirates failed to increase their lead of one game, as the Giants out-gunned Boston, 9 to 6. Hits by Hornsby and Terry did the dirty work.

Meanwhile the Cards, 13 to 1, and took third place away from them. The Cards gave Pitchers Jones and Brillheart a merry shellacking, while old Pete Alexander stood for no nonsense from the Braves. The world's champions are a game and a half behind the Giants.

Babe Ruth went wild and walloped three homers and Gehrig hit another, but an even break was the best the Yankees could do against the Red Sox. The champs lost the nightcap, 5 to 2, after having murdered the Sox in the opener, 14 to 2.

The Athletics lost a 14 to 9 slugfest to Washington, but in the second game Ed Rummel limited the Nats to four hits and blanked them 4 to 0.

Barrett's homer with the bases loaded staked the White Sox to a 9 to 6 victory over the Tigers. The Browns trimmed the Indians, 7 to 4, in a contest made unusual by the fact that neither team scored more than one run in any inning.

Tunney Eases up Under Sultry Heat of Middle-west; Rain Relieves Conditions.

GENE TUNNEY'S TRAINING CAMP, LAKE VILLE, ILL., Sept. 7.—The break in the weather that Gene Tunney's trainers had been anxiously awaiting came today.

The champion has been suffering from the heat and had curtailed his workouts for the rest of the week, fearing that he might overtrain.

A violent electrical storm accompanied by a heavy rain broke the sultry wave, however, and cooled the atmosphere considerably.

Tunney had found that by emerging suddenly from the cool seclusion of his summer camp in the Adirondack mountains into the sultry heat of the middle west he was perspiring too heavily during his workouts and was losing too much weight. As he is only four or five pounds over the mark he expects to make for Dempsey he decided to let up on his training.

The change in weather, however, will mean the resumption of operation. The rain soaked the outdoor ring and there will be no sparring exhibition this afternoon, but work will be resumed tomorrow.

The camp was up bright and early this morning and out on the road, doing his four miles with Sergeant Bill Smith, appointed from the Chicago detective bureau to act as his body guard, and Eddie Eagan, Tunney's Oxford-graduate companion.

The champion is making every effort to avoid the crowds and lead as quiet a life as possible. After his dinner last night he hurried to his rooms in the cedar Crest Country Club house and spent the evening with Eagan listening to operatic records on the phonograph.

Jimmy Bronson, who used to referee fights when Tunney was a marine in France and who will be in the champion's corner during the coming fight is due in camp tomorrow. Bronson was Gene's second when he beat Dempsey in Philadelphia a year ago. His arrival will complete the champion's staff.

In the workout tomorrow Tunney will be without the services of his star sparring partner, Church Wiggins. Wiggins left camp last night to fight Tiny Herman in Evansville, Ind., Thursday night. He will return Friday.

Mike piled up a fine record at High Point, but has not been used to a great extent at Wichita, although what little work he has done has been up to form.

Mike may appear in a few baseball scraps here.

Fighters Land In Jail Cells

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 7.—W. L. Stribling, Atlanta light heavyweight Leo Diebel, introduced as a product of Oklahoma City and Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion of the world, today looked out from behind the bars of the city police station, having spent the night there following their arrest last night.

The charge was "investigation." The arrests were made by the city chief of detectives when the scheduled ten round fight between Stribling and Diebel was stopped in the sixth round. Referee James Drexel declared Diebel didn't know how to fight and that Stribling wasn't trying to damage his opponent. Johnson, who was with Diebel's corner, tried to interfere with officers when they arrested his protégé and his arrest followed.

Today on investigation into the affair is to be made by the state boxing commission at Lincoln. Ira Voorhees, a member of the commission, saw the fight. It is expected that police will release the fighters and order them to appear at Lincoln.

Stribling, when taken to the police station, claimed an injured right hand kept him from using that member in the fight. A police surgeon examined the hand and found only an old bruise, which he said should not have bothered the Georgian.

"The Cord Tires accept the challenge," said Riley. "We'll play them for a $500 side bet and a 60-40 division of the gate receipts."

With And Without Gloves

A Girl's-Eye View of Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey

By Katherine Brush

Introducing Mr. Tunney and Mr. Dempsey:

The trouble is, of course, that they've been introduced before, some hundred thousand odd times. If you are not any sort of a sport fan or even any sort of a sport fan's wife, you know them well. You know how much they weigh, and how tall they stand, and when they were born, and where, and what their respective mothers christened them, and how far they can reach with their respective, and respected, Mighty Rights. And these, of course, are the things you should know, the things that matter.

I may as well be frank. What I am going to tell you about the champion and the challenger doesn't matter a hoot. I mean to say, nothing in this article will help you decide how to place your bets for September 21st, or what to watch for from your ringside seat. But if you are interested in the personalities back of the punches, in the faces back of the fists, I'll give you a girl's-eye view.

A year ago this month, in the Sequi-Centennial Stadium at Philadelphia, 110,000 were gathered together, 109,999, and me. It drizzled. Then it rained. Then it poured. There was a bright lit elevator square, a little golden glade enclosed in ropes and roofed with calcium, centering the great, restless, guttural-throated sea of dark and shadow. In the glade, in the glare, gentlemen one didn't care about socked gentlemen one had never heard of, for no apparent reason but for on unconscionable time.

Along Came Gene. Then down an aisle—by some fortuitous chance the aisle adjoining the seat where I sat with a soggy newspaper round my neck in a bo formation and my marcel fighting a losing fight with the rain—came a Group. Briskly they came. Policemen. Trainers with towels. And in their midst, a long boy, a broad boy, wearing a blue and gold bathrobe bearing insignia of the Marines across his shoulders. He was very large. He was very young. As he walked he smiled a little—and a more ingenuous, boyish smile I've never beheld. It was almost bashful. "Geel!" it seemed to say "Geel! Look at all the people!"

I had not seen him before; and I dash now to admit that I felt suddenly terrible sorry for him. In connection with the 109,999, of most of it, I thought he was going to be beaten. I felt sure he was headed for the licking of my life. I believe I even murmured something in my escort's ear about, "a lamb to the slaughter"—at least he says I did, and tells it gleefully on me.

Tunney's performance on that rally night is ancient history. I was not sorry for him very long. But my first impression of him, as young, ingenuous, shy, remained. It was the memory of his entering smile, rather than of his fistic prowess, that I, being a woman, carried away with me. Even the glimpse I caught of Dempsey's torn face, like a great gray fillet steak with eyes, did not dispel it.

In the Lion's Den. I returned to New York imbued with a plan. I would interview Tunney. I would write a story of him for a magazine. And I would call the story "Big Boy." It was, I thought, the only, the inevitable, title. "Big Boy." I interviewed Tunney. It took me two hours. Waiting time one hour, forty-five minutes. I waited in the darkest and innermost of a string of little cluttered offices belonging to Tunney's manager, whom I did not see. I sat on the top of a clerk's high stool. Patience on a monument, and regarded thoughtfully the framed photographs of fighters whose paths of glory led to the movies, or where have you?

KATHERINE BRUSH is the popular and magnetic young author of "Gilt-Tier" and "Little Sins." The latter book has just been issued by her publishers.

Ultimately Tunney came. I was apprized of his arrival by a stir in the outer office, an exchange of greetings, and finally, the voice of one mouthing a cigar as he spoke: "Dame in there to see you, Gene. Says she's a reporter. Says she's got n'appointment." The voice obviously deemed this extremely unlikely.

The champion appeared, pausing only to sign a batch of letters, make two telephone calls, and put in a call to Philadelphia. He was very large—larger even than, when surrounded by burly cops or limed beside the Herculean Dempsey, he had seemed. He wore a light brown suit, well-tailored, and a neat back four-in-hand tie. He was sunburned, curly-haired—and polite. Almost Chesterfieldian. He bowed over my extended hand, and shook it (I am happy to say) gently.

"I hear," I began, for one has to begin somehow, "that you dislike to be interviewed by newspaper women. Mr. Tunney?"

Mr. Tunney started. He started at me, with incredulous, and disapproving, blue eyes. "I read it somewhere," I mumbled hastily.

Mr. Tunney still stared. He drew himself erect. His lips parted, and his deep voice sounded. "It's a fallacy!" he said. He really did.

Living Up To a Reputation.

It was then I decided that maybe "Big Boy" wasn't such a pat title after all. It was then, too, that I remembered other things I'd read about Gene Tunney. That he enjoyed Browning and Henry James. That his trainers carried dictionaries in their pockets so they could find out what he meant when he addressed them. Somehow that stadium smile had made me forget these things.

The interview proceeded. Mr. Tunney, leaning against a desk, talked. He talked about the mothers of America. He said he felt that the mothers of America were looking to him as an example of fine, clean young manhood, to which they could point their sons. He said that he was no longer himself, that he no longer belonged to himself. He said that now he belonged to the world, "as the stars belong to the firmament."

Boyish? Ingenuous? Shy?

And yet, somehow, I liked him. And the more he talked in this weird vein, the better I liked him—because the more certain I became that this wasn't Gene Tunney speaking. I imagine that if the real Gene Tunney spoke, he would talk somewhat as you and I do: I imagine he would say, not, "It's a fallacy," but "It's the bunk!"—Browning or no Browning. The Tunney tradition of erudition was created by the sports writers: the Tunney trouble is that now he tries to live up to it—and cannot—quite.

I've seen him twice since then. Once he was having tea at the Ritz, downstairs where they dance at tea time. They did not dance. They sat at an inconspicuous table, drinking orange pekoe and eating little cakes. Tunney, he said for him, didn't appear to want anyone to recognize him. But he held his tea-cup with his little finger crooked, just in case anyone should.

The last time I saw him was at the Yankee stadium the night Dempsey knocked out Sharkey. Before the bout he scrambled through the ropes, shook hands with the combatants, bowed to the crowd, and scrambled out again. Big and bronzed and smiling. I liked him that night too, but I guess you didn't for you—or somebody or other—booed.

No Mistake About Dempsey.

My mental picture of Dempsey are three. Two are ring pictures, conventional Dempsey pictures; the Manassa Mauler in action. The flay of his arms, the shift of his feet, the drive of his magnificent body. The atmosphere of smoke and noise, of banked tense faces, of matches flaring sudden in the gloom—the Big Fight atmosphere, to which Jack belongs like the final letter in a crossword puzzle. With Tunney it is different. Pictorially Tunney does not fit. He might be a salesman, a politician, a business man, rigged out in satin pants and plump brown mittens. But Dempsey is a pugilist, pictorially as actually. You think of him as having been born in satin pants; and you feel that he will die (at a green old age) with his gloves on.

I once saw Jack wearing dinner clothes. But I didn't quite believe in it. I had a sense of unreality, of masquerade. "What," I felt like saying, "are you going to?" This is the third picture. The background is Hollywood; more particularly, the ballroom of the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles, which is a Hollywood suburb. The ballroom was ringed with tables, big and little. An orchestra played, and inside the tables stars and directors, leading ladies and producers—a most distinguished gathering—dined.

The party was given by and for the Mayfair club, and lucky indeed I felt to gain admission. Nobody belongs to the Mayfair club except people connected with the film industry; but as the guest of one of such I was there—very wide-eyed, like an unicorn at a circus. There was so much to see! Never in my life have I beheld all together so many such beautiful people. Constance Talmadge, Richard Barthelmess, Greta Garbo, Norman Kerry, Clara Bow, Lauda La Plante—I could go on listing them indefinitely, but I won't. Just name over a couple of hundred of your favorite movie folks, and add Will Hays, and you will have the guest roster in toto.

And Jack Can Dance.

Dempsey and Estelle Taylor Dempsey presided over a table near the orchestra, whereat they entertained six friends almost as famous as themselves. Mrs. Dempsey looked lovely and exotic in a metal cloth gown with a very full skirt to her heels and a tight bodice. Jack sat across the table from her, registering pride. Their romance, you know, is one of the most romantic in the film colony, and their marriage one to which all Hollywood points with pride, as having nobly and notably withstood the tests of time and temperament.

The scenario writer at whose table I dined, knew the Dempsseys very well indeed, and before the evening was over his guests and theirs were mingling on the dancing floor. Everybody fox-trotted with everybody else—and so it came to pass that I fox-trotted with Dempsey. Or perhaps it would be better to say that Dempsey fox-trotted with me. All one has to do when he is one's partner is take deep breaths and hang on.

I do not mean to imply that Jack is not a good dancer. He is a remarkably good. His footwork in the ring has been a boxing byword for years, and his footwork on the dance floor almost equals it. But you are conscious of the time of his tremendous strength, and the consciousness is vaguely disturbing. You have a feeling that if you should tread on his foot he might get cross and toss you into the county adjoining.

We talked about Mrs. Dempsey. "Babe," her husband calls her. I remarked on her extraordinary loveliness, and Jack said fervently, "You bet I think so!" Several feet above the top of my head his brown eyes searched for a little in the throng. He frowned a little. "She's working too hard, though," he said. "This new picture, I tell her she's got to cut it out."

Appreciate to Jack. "And you?" I queried. "Are you (Continued on Page Twelve)" working hard these days?" He grinned his celebrated grin. "Me? I'm just loafing."

"When are you going to fight again?" "I wanted to know."

"This was last January."

"Oh, sometime," Jack said casually. "I guess."

"I saw you in Philadelphia," I ventured.

"Yeah?" said Jack, pleasantly enough. And said no more.

I took a new tack. "What do you think of Tunney?"

"Nice fellow," said Jack. "And a great fighter."

I had a thought. I would say to Dempsey what I had said to Tunney—and compare answers. First, however, it was necessary to explain that I was a scribe of sorts. I explained this, apologetically.

"You should've told me," Jack complained cheerfully. "I didn't know I was talking for publication."

"I was afraid to tell you," I said, because—well, it seems to me I've read somewhere that you hate to talk to women reporters. Is that true? Or is it a fallacy?"

Jack grinned again. "It's applesauce," he said.

And there you are.

Love's Fatal Lure

LOVE never flowered into a more beautiful romance than that which culminated in the marriage of Beatrice and Joe. It seemed that ahead of them lay only happiness.

The fact that Joe's salary was small—that he was still studying for a bigger job—seemed not to matter—at first. But as time passed, with the financial goal still far ahead, Beatrice's mind often clouded with worry and doubt. Her girl friends, more fortunately married, had pretty clothes, smart cars, lovely homes, which they were forever flaunting before her envious eyes.

For a long time Beatrice nursed her growing discontent in stony silence. But the seed of revolt had started its deadly growth, and Beatrice secretly determined to "taste the joys of life," regardless of consequences.

Little did she dream of the terrible lengths to which her desperate folly was to lead her. So she went desperately, blindly ahead, soon to be caught in a seething maelstrom of disaster, anguish and terror that was to forever destroy her hopes for future happiness.

Don't miss the story of this wife's tragic, soul-stirring experience. It is entitled "Under Cover of Matrimony," and appears complete in True Story for October.

"The door crashed inward. Belay was struggling in Paul's arms. Myrtle leaped forward, revolver raised. In the scuffle which followed, a shot rang out." (From "Under Cover of Matrimony," October True Story Magazine.)

Stories More Amazing Because True

"The most interesting thing about life," said a great psychologist, "is its astonishing unexpectedness." This is especially true when applied to the dramatic happenings in the lives of human beings. Some startling event transpires in the life of a friend, or a well-known public personality. And we wonder at the hidden motives, the untold hate, love, sacrifice, temptation, human error or folly that brought it about.

In True Story Magazine every month the mysterious forces that make men and women do the things they do, are fully and frankly revealed. If you want to peer into the souls of those who have really lived—if you want to learn the truth about life—its struggles, defeats, triumphs and tragedies, buy True Story every month. Your newsdealer has the October issue, which contains seventeen gripping features. Get your copy today.

(Above)—"YOU'VE DISGRACED US ALL," she said. With her future assured by her coming marriage to a man old enough to be her father, Jacqueline's parents thought she ought to be happy. But she had given her heart to another—and with one act she started a seething drama that none of them will ever forget. (See "The Son I Must Forget," True Story for October.)
